Navy Federal Awarded for Commitment to Employee Training

Vienna, Va. (February 22, 2013) – For the fifth consecutive year, Training magazine recognized Navy Federal Credit Union as a Top 125 company on its list of organizations that excelled in employee development in 2012. Training selects this prestigious list of companies based on programs tied to business objectives, best training practices, and outstanding training initiatives, among other criteria. The credit union ranked among other high performers such as Intel, McDonald's, and Verizon.

"Navy Federal invests more than funds in employees' capabilities—it's about engagement," commented Louise Foreman, executive vice president, Human Resources. "Our employees know they can count on us to help them grow professionally, and our members know that we have a workforce that is fully equipped to deliver exceptional service."

The credit union offers a variety of training and development programs that range from in-house interactive resources to company-paid employee-development programs. The annual survey of employer-sponsored training and leadership development programs is based on a variety of factors including demonstrable results, scope of training programs offered and how closely the programs link to the company's business goals.
